7 BRITISH SHIPS SUNK

HUGE SEA RAIDERS PREY ON SHIPS

LONDON, July 2.—Six big British ships, one large Italian vessel, and a small British schooner have been sunk within a few hours by German's new "submarine dreadnoughts" which have just taken the seas.

The first appearance of these big and powerful submarines was last Monday when the Armenian was sunk by the U-38.

Eleven men perished in one of these disasters. One of the vessels sunk was bound for New Orleans, but no one was lost from her.

The eight ships sunk within the past few hours are:

British ship Caucasian, 4,656 tons.
British ship Inglemoor, 4,331 tons.
British ship Tunistana, 4,230 tons.
British ship Welbury, 3,591 tons.
British ship Argyll, 3,457 tons.
British ship Thistlebank, 2,411 tons.
Italian ship Sardomene, 2,000 tons.
British ship L. C. Tower, 518 tons.

Heretofore most of the ships sunk have been of less than 2,000 tons. The sinking of the Armenian last Monday, when several Americans were lost, was apparently the opening of the new submarine campaign.

A description of the submarine dreadnoughts comes from Copenhagen. According to this dispatch there are at least ten now afloat or nearing completion.

They are the biggest, fastest and most dangerous under-sea boats in existence.

They carry guns fore and aft, four torpedo tubes and a powerful wireless outfit.

They are capable of a 2,000-mile voyage without discomfort. Some of them are over 300 feet long.

Captain Trickey of the Armenian has said that the submarine which sank his vessel was about 300 feet long. He also stated that that submarine fired shots "over our bow" from a range of four miles. This would mean that the submarines carry as heavy guns as are to be found on the average light cruiser.

The British mark Thistlebank, with a cargo of wheat for Queenstown, was torpedoed and sunk off Fastnet. Some of the crew have reached land in their boats, but particulars are lacking.

The Thistlebank was of 2,411 tons.

TAKE REFUGE ON KITCHEN TABLE IN FLOODED HOUSE

Viola Goodwin of East Boston and her kittens Teddie and Minnie, who, with the girl's mother, were marooned on the kitchen table.

Landlord upstairs heard S. O. S. call, donned his rubber boots and hurried to the rescue. He carried all to safety on the stairway.

If you haven't got a boat,
When your kitchen is afloat,
There isn't any need of great alarm.
For a tabletop will do
As a private boat for two,
From which to view the water safe from harm.

Any kid along Emmons street in East Boston today was able to tell right away the biggest piece of news from the storm—the heaviest rain Boston has had in twenty years.

The "big news" is how Viola Goodwin and her mamma and her two kittens got on a table top in their kitchen with the kitchen all afloat, until the landlord rescued them.

Viola and her mamma live at No. 9 Emmons street, in the basement. Viola's papa is a fisherman and is out on the fishing grounds for days and days at a time.

Viola's mamma, Mrs. Etta Goodwin, was awakened by the storm, when the rain was coming down ker-slap! Mamma got up to close the windows and found three feet of water in the kitchen.

Mamma ran into the bedroom, picked up Viola and started to get out. But it was dark and terribly stormy and mamma decided the best thing to do was to get on the kitchen table and keep dry.

Viola thought of her pet kittens right away. She wasn't going to have them drowned—if even wet. Kittens hate water so much. So Viola took a kittie under each chubby arm. Mamma took Viola, kittens and all and sat her on the table. Then mamma stepped on a chair and then on the table and there they sat.

By and by Mamma called out so loudly that the landlord, Peter LeCourt, who lives upstairs, heard her. He ran down, poked his head in and ran back, got his rubber boots on and then came down again. He waded in, took mamma out to the stairway, then came back for Viola —and the kittens.

Fear For Liner Adriatic

ATTACK THAW'S SANITY

POLICEMEN AGAINST THAW

By L. V. B. RUCKER,
Special Correspondent of International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The State today produced its first witnesses in the Harry K. Thaw sanity trial to prove that the slayer of Stanford White is insane and should be returned to Matteawan.

Policeman Frank McFadden of Coatlcook, Que., and his superior, Inspector H. Giroux, who became involved in the Thaw case when Thaw escaped from Matteawan in 1913 and fled into Canada, both testified that they believe Thaw irrational.

They told of Thaw's throwing a beer bottle through a window of the Coatlcook jail and of other outbreaks. Giroux said he considers Thaw "Dangerously mad."

On cross-examination, however, the police inspector had to admit that all of Coatlcook was excited on the day Thaw was deported.

A great mass of documentary evidence relating to Thaw's efforts to obtain his freedom through habeas corpus proceedings were introduced.

Another witness for the State was James S. Barrett, who was doorman at the Old Tenderloin police station when Thaw was taken there after he had shot White. He told of Thaw's actions, but his testimony did not seem to do Thaw's case much harm. Barrett was unable to remember very much.

Deputy Attorney-General Cook today said he was convinced that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw would come to New York and be ready to testify against her husband next Tuesday.

The State's case will last at least nine more days. There will be no court tomorrow or Monday.

Red Sox Games Off; Two for Tomorrow

Today's double-header scheduled for Fenway Park between the Red Sox and Athletics was called off at 10:30 today on account of the rain. Two games will be played tomorrow, weather permitting, the first starting at 1:30 o'clock.

SAY TRAP IS SET FOR LINER

NEW YORK, July 2.—The White Star liner Adriatic, which sailed from here last Wednesday for Liverpool, faces a dual trap of German submarines, according to rumor prevalent today in German circles of this city.

Aboard the Adriatic are Sir Robert Laird Borden, the Canadian premier, and several prominent Englishmen.

Also the liner carries, it is reported, a large supply of war munitions. It is on this account, the rumor goes, that the German Admiralty is determined to destroy her.

This Adriatic report goes so far as to say that the German Admiralty has given orders for the undersea forces to lie in wait for the liner at two different points, covering the routes north and south of Ireland.

One submarine will be in waiting off the southwest coast of Ireland, another will wait off the north coast of Ireland, the rumor has it. No matter which route the liner chooses, according to this plan of attack, she will be in peril of a German sea-diver.

NOTABLES ABOARD.

The presence of the Canadian Premier and of prominent Englishmen aboard the liner does not deter the German Admiralty in any degree from its resolution to sink the Adriatic, if this report can be taken at its face value.

The detail reported as to the double submarine trap, so as to intercept the liner either side of Ireland, would be consistent with such intention.

On recent trips of the Adriatic the

REDMOND SCORES BRITISH CABINET

By International News Service.

DUBLIN, July 2.—In a sensational speech here last night, John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, voiced his distrust of the new national cabinet of England and predicted that the government would collapse within a week if it attempted any "insane proposal" like the repeal of the Home Rule law.

"I do not favor the coalition government and cannot understand why it is necessary," said Mr. Redmond. "My mistrust of it was showed plainly by my refusal to join it, but it was only formed for the war time period.

"Home Rule for Ireland will automatically go into effect at the end of war, and nothing can prevent it unless the coalition government proposes to repeal the law. If such an insane proposal is put forward the government won't last a week."

BOND FOR RELEASE GIVEN IN COURT

Harry K. Mansfield, former proprietor of Ferncroft Inn at Middleton and defendant in the famous "Toodles" $50,000 breach of promise suit, which he recently settled by a payment, out of court, to Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan, was arraigned in the District Court at Salem today on a complaint charging conspiracy to unlawfully enter a name on the voting lists of the town.

Mansfield was held in bail of $1,000 for a hearing on Wednesday. He pleaded not guilty, as did Charles Conrad, who was a waiter at Ferncroft Inn when Mansfield was owner, and who is now an employe there. Conrad was similarly accused and was held in the same amount.

The arraignment today is the first court action on charges of wholesale illegal registration of voters in the town. The facts brought out in these

When the liner sailed from Liverpool on May 16 for New York a large quantity of lumber was strewn about her hurricane deck, both fore and aft, to provide boating material in case the vessel was torpedoed.

The lifeboats were all equipped with new ropes and tackle. These were thoroughly tested. All the boats were swung out, so they could be launched without the slightest delay.

The Adriatic arrived in New York on that voyage on May 23. Among the passengers was John Borden, the Chicago millionaire, brother of Sir Robert Borden, the Dominion Premier who is on the Adriatic now.

The Adriatic is a twin-screw steamer, 709 feet long. She was built in Belfast in 1906 by the Harland & Wolff Company and was formerly in the Boston-Liverpool service of the White Star Company. She has 15,625 gross tonnage.

AMERICAN FROM ARMENIAN HELD ON GERMAN SUBMARINE

By HAYDEN TALBOT,

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

CARDIFF, Wales, July 2.—Several members of the crew of the torpedoed Leyland liner Armenian, among them Dr. J. S. Viso of Richmond, Va., were made prisoners by the German submarine U-38, which sank the steamship, according to survivors who are in Cardiff.

Those taken on board the U-38 were picked up out of the water after a shell from the submarine had cut the ropes of a filled lifeboat which was being lowered. Instead of placing them in another boat, however, the Germans retained them.

It is declared that, while the Germans showed consideration for the whites they acted harshly toward the negroes. Some of the negro stock tenders who were thrown into the water when the ropes of the lifeboat were cut swam toward the submarine. When they tried to clamber on board the German sailors kicked their hands.

Captain J. Trickey of the Armenian was the last man to leave his ship.

An exciting story is told by Ernest Robert Talbot, a fifteen-year-old cabin boy, and it has all the thrills of a sea tale by Robert Louis Stevenson.

"That was my first trip," said young Talbot, who was among the thirty-seven persons who left the Armenian in the first lifeboat. It was this lifeboat that was plunged into the water by a German shell cutting the ropes.

"The boat was about half way down," continued the cabin boy, "when along came a shell and clipped the ropes clean. We all tumbled into the water and began swimming around.

"I guess I must have been in the water for an hour before I was picked up by another boat, which I found to contain my brother. We were in the lifeboat about twelve hours before being picked up, but it was not so bad, for the weather was clear and the water smooth.

"We all got mighty thirsty though, and I was an hungry I could have eaten my boots. All through the night we could see the Germans firing minute lights while they looked for another ship to sink.

"At first we thought the flares came from the lighthouse on Lundy Island and rowed in that direction, but when the Germans discovered us they fired a shell toward our boat and we turned around and rowed away as fast as we could.

"At the last the Belgian trawler President Stevens came along and took us on board, landing us at Milfordhaven, Wales. There were twenty-eight members of the Armenian's crew on the Belgian boat, one of them the chief officer of the Armenian, who had been wounded in the back by a fragment of shell.

"The only officer drowned was the fourth officer. Four of the crew died in one boat. One male was blown almost off and another had both his legs shot away.

"Captain Trickey, who was the last man to leave the Armenian, acted splendidly.

"Two of the lifeboats were found to be water-logged, so Captain Trickey had five lifeboats lashed together with the water-logged ones in the middle so that they would not sink.

"The U-38 took on board the ship's doctor, who is an American. They also took on board two other white men. When the negroes tried to climb on board the submarine the German sailors kicked them off.

"I had a mighty narrow escape before Captain Trickey surrendered. I was standing on the deck alongside of a negro seaman named Johnson, when suddenly this man struck me with his fist, knocking me flat. As I fell a shell struck the deck right at my head. The negro had heard the noise of the approaching shell. It missed him but killed four men inside the deck house."

Twenty-two survivors were brought to Cardiff and are being cared for here by the steamship's union. Several wounded are in the war hospital at Bristol.

The Armenian lasted half an-hour after being torpedoed, according to John Wiley, a member of the engine room force, who said:

"I was in the engine room all the time we were being shelled. It was not until a shell came down through the engine room skylight and smashed one of the cylinders that we gave up hope of escaping.

"It was about five minutes after 8 when the Armenian went down with her bow high in the air. This was thirty minutes after she had been torpedoed. I saw Germans kicking colored men who tried to climb aboard the submarine.

"The boat in which I got away started with only sixteen in it, but within half an hour we had increased to thirty-six. I saw W. H. Perks, the ship's baker, killed. His body was blown to pieces."

In all about one hundred shells were fired at the Armenian. The cannonade was directed by the commander of the submarine who, wearing greasy brown overalls, stood leaning against the conning tower of the submarine.

'DREADNOUGHT' SUBMARINES IN NEW WARFARE ON BRITISH SHIPS

The Inglemoor, owned by the Moor line, was a ship 363 feet long, of 4,33 tons. London was her home port.

Both boats were sunk by the U-38, a sister ship of the U-34, which sank the Armenian. The Caucasian was first halted and after her crew had left she was sunk. The crew were picked up by the Inglemoor. The submarine immediately rose to the surface, stopped the Inglemoor, allowed her crew and the crew of the Caucasian to re-embark in their boats and sank the vessel.

These ships were attacked oc the Lizard, the extreme southwestern point of Ireland.

The British schooner L. C. Tower, of 518 tons, bound from Nova Scotia to Newport, was sunk after her crew had been allowed to take to the boats. She sailed from Parrisboro, Nova Scotia, June 1.

The chief officer and eighteen men of the Cascasian, with all the sailors of the Inglemoor, were landed at Falmouth. Others of the crew were taken to Penzance.

GERMANS MAKE TURN TOWARD WARSAW

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, July 2.—Field Marshal von Mackensen has suddenly determined to make a sensational coup in the direction of Warsaw, according to latest advices received by the War Office today.

The German commander has sent his main army toward Cholm, the junction of the Cholm-Brest-Litovsk and Cholm-Ivangorod railway. His purpose is apparently to capture the Russian rail lines on which Ivangorod depends, and then to advance to the railways that reach Warsaw, completing an investment of the fortresses of Ivangorod and Warsaw.

In their withdrawal before the superior forces of the enemy the Russians have shortened the distance over which it is necessary to transport reinforcements and ammunition. The Germans and Austrians have lengthened their lines of communication.

All reports from the front agree that there has been a noticeable slackening in the artillery fire of the Austro-German forces. This is due to the fact that in their advance eastward they have "run away" from their ammunition supplies in the hope of piercing the Russian front—a plan that is declared by the Russian leaders to have completely failed.

A dispatch from Austrian headquarters announced that Ivangorod was the next goal of the Austro-German forces. The foregoing distinguish from Petrograd sheds further light on the Austro-German campaign.

GERMANS PLAN GREAT BLOW IN WEST

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, July 3.—Another great blow by the German armies in the West is being prepared for by the French. It is expected either at Ypres or in Alsace, though the recent operations by the Crown Prince's army in the Argonne indicate that point on the French front may be the scene of the next great Teutonic thrust.

The military experts of the Echo de Paris declares that the object of the Germans in closing the Swiss frontier until July 12 is to conceal the transportation of troops from the Russian to the western front. This movement is now in full swing.

French aviators have reported that train after train bearing soldiers is now being transported over the German railways.

USE POISON GASES.

The army of Crown Prince Frederick William is continuing its efforts to pierce the French army in the Argonne region. With the finest of the Prussian troops heavily reinforced, his army is maintaining its attacks, but the French claim to have repulsed them all.

The communique issued by the War Office this afternoon characterizes the fighting of last night in the Argonne as "most violent." In their attacks the Germans used big bomb throwers and poisonous gases. The attack of last night, like those of Wednesday night and Thursday, was repelled.

The Germans have also taken the offensive in the Arras district. They made attacks on the French positions on the Ablain road during the night, but were repulsed.

THE PARIS COMMUNIQUE.

The text of the official communique follows:

"The cannonade was violent all night at a great number of points on the front, notably in the region of Woesten, northwest of Ypres, in that of Souchez and in that of Verneuil, to the north of Ablain.

"After a violent and continued bombardment an attack by the enemy's grenadiers was launched about 2 o'clock this morning against our positions on the road from Ablain to Angres to the north of the Bethune highway. It was completely checked. Near La Baisselle one of our mines destroyed the advanced field works of the enemy.

"In the Argonne the battle continued most violently all night. A single attack by the enemy was attempted with the support of his bomb throwers and asphyxiating bombs. It was repulsed.

"At Quart-en-reserve, in the forest of Le Prestre, there was also reported a movement by the enemy which followed a violent bombardment and which was immediately repulsed by the fire of our infantry."

Austrian Flying Machine Destroyed

By International News Service.

NISH, Servia, July 2.—Destruction of an Austrian aeroplane that bombarded Belgrade was announced today by the Servian War Office. The following statement was issued.

"Early Sunday we forced a landing and captured Micharska. We took 185 prisoners; the enemy lost heavily in killed and wounded. Our booty included a field telephone, 106 rifles with bayonets and five ammunition wagons. Early Monday four hostile aeroplanes flew over the suburbs of Belgrade. They were attacked by our artillery fire. One was forced to land on the Dejanla heights, where it caught fire and burned. The other three bombarded Obrenovats without result."

BRITISH TAKE BURNING OIL THROWER

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, July 2.—British troops have captured one of the machines used by the Germans to throw burning liquid upon the allies' troops and a description of the contrivance is given in a narrative written by the official English "eye witness" at the front and issued by the government press bureau today.

"The captured apparatus" says the eye witness, "comprises a portable reservoir holding inflammable liquid and means for spreading it. The form in which it is carried strapped to a man's back is a steel cylinder containing oil and compressed air.

"Separate chambers for the latter consist of suitable lengths of metal pipe.

"It is fitted with universal joints and a nozzle capable of rotation in any direction. When the valve is turned on the air pressure forces the oil out of the nozzle for more than twenty yards. The oil is ignited automatically at the nozzle and continues to issue in a sheet of flame until the air pressure falls low or the oil is extinguished."

The narrative gives the following information as to military preparations:

"South of Messina on June 24 some Bavarians who had recently taken over a section of trenches executed their presence in the front line by undertaking a local offensive effort.

"A party under a lieutenant advanced to make a bomb attack on our trenches, but the men did not follow their officer, who was bayoneted on our parapet.

"In one quarter of the front on June 25 our artillery silenced three German guns, blew down a house which was sheltering a fourth and also dispersed hostile working parties in front of Cuinchy.

"The La Basse church, which has been a familiar landmark in front of our right, is gradually disappearing. The Germans so far have knocked down the front part of the roof."

Premier Declares Spain Is Neutral

MADRID, July 2.—Discussing war and internal conditions in Spain, Premier Dato said there was no foundation for the allegation that the Spanish government favored the cause of the Triple entente. He declared Spain favored neither side, and was acting as fairly as it could.

German Exports Show Big Loss

BERLIN, July 2.—During the first six months of this year there was exported to the United States and American possessions from Hamburg, Luebeck and Kiel, goods to the value of $1,153,000. Statistics on this trade for the first six months of 1914 show the export of goods valued at $14,994,000.

ALLIES STORM DEFENCES OF THE PORTE

By COMPTON MACKENZIE.
Famous Novelist and Dramatist, Officially Accompanying the British Forces at the Dardanelles.

THE DARDANELLES (via London), July 2.—We are now forming an immensely strong fort defending Constantinople and British and Australian troops by an amusing feat of arms have already taken the outer works of Kilid Bahr plateau. They are drawing against them a large part of the garrison, which is composed of the flower of the Turkish army.

TURKS REPULSED.

On the nights of June 11 and 12 there was a brilliant little action by a regiment of South Wales Borderers, which resulted in a gain of two trenches. On June 16 the Turks, led by a Turkish-German officer, made an assault on the trenches of the Twenty-Eighth Brigade, but were driven off with losses.

On June 12 it was determined to straighten the lines on the extreme right. All the morning the cannonade proceeded and by noon the second division of the French on the left had stormed and captured all the Turkish trenches of the first two lines. On the right the first division, after reaching their objective, had fallen back. Again they advanced and again took the trenches and again they were driven out.

At this moment a message was sent saying the trenches must be recaptured and held. British guns and howitzers were asked for and lent at once. The bombardment was resumed and continued throughout the afternoon. At 4:30 it resembled as though everything on earth was pouring shells into the Turkish lines.

TURKS FIGHT VALIANTLY.

At 6 o'clock the third assault was delivered. In one trench there was a temporary shortage of ammunition.

The Turks fought even with stones and sticks. The 6th Italian company hurrying up from the Turkish right to reinforce, they were caught on open ground by the Gomme 75's and melted away.

The six hundred yards of Turkish trenches were taken and still the bombardment continued in order to ward off the counter attack anticipated. The Turkish casualties were at least 7,000. One trench 200 yards long and ten feet deep, was brimming over with dead.

They were brilliant, these dead men. With his back to the wall the Turk is magnificent. After such horror we took part in the last attack on the Gallipoli peninsula, which commenced with a sustained bombardment from the French batteries. At 6 o'clock the next morning, it developed that the general assault was on the Haricot position, which was carried.

AGAIN REPULSE TURKS.

At noon the assault was renewed, with the result that several lines of the Turks' trenches near Kereves Dere, beyond the Haricot position, were captured.

The Turks tried in two assaults during the night, to retake the lost positions, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

The French in this attack expended an enormous amount of shells. It is calculated that ten shells were exploded in each square yard of ground in the attacked positions.

IMPORTANT HEIGHTS WON BY THE ALLIES ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA

By International News Service.

ATHENS, July 2.—No official confirmation has yet been received of reports that the allies have captured Krithia, chief defensive position of the Turks on the Gallipoli Peninsula, but it is known that the Anglo-French forces have won important heights and have inflicted heavy losses on the Ottoman troops.

The Turkish losses in the last ten days of fighting near Krithia are estimated at more than 12,000 men.

Supported by the allied warships, which poured a terrific fire upon the Turks' redoubts, French troops on Wednesday captured several trenches and communicating tunnels which the Turks had constructed.

The bombardment by the warships caused severe damage to the Turkish forts. It was conducted from the Dardanelles and from the Gulf of Saros.

British Destroyer Lightning Is Sunk

LONDON, July 2.—The torpedo boat destroyer Lightning has been lost and fourteen members of her crew are missing, according to an announcement by the British admiralty. Although no mention is made of the way the Lightning was sunk, it is presumed she struck a mine or was torpedoed.

The Lightning was built in 1895. She was a vessel of 320 tons and her armament consisted of one twelve-pounder and five six-pounders. In time of peace her complement was fifty men.

Take Lime for Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (July 27, 1912, page 308), Dr. C. F. Dixon, of Minneapolis, holds that a "deficiency of calcium" (lime) is responsible for the physical conditions which lead to tuberculosis, "and the therapy he advocates rests on this basis."

One of the vehicles for the internal use of Eckman's Alterative in the treatment of tuberculosis is its ability to supply this deficiency. It contains a lime salt in such combination with other valuable agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person. Many cases seem to have yielded to it.

We make no exaggerated claims for it, but prefer that it be tried on the same basis as any other proprietary, and owing to it containing opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs it is safe. Sold by all Baker Drug stores and leading druggists.

Sempre Avanti Su Trento

Dopo il Consiglio di Guerra tenuto ad Inabruck, sembra che gli Austriaci abbiano preso coraggio. Han fatto due disperati attacchi, uno in Val Sugana, l'altro al passo di Val Calidera, ma sono stati respinti.

Gli Italiani possono ora avanzare da ambo i lati del Brenta, seguendo le linee ferroviarie, di Val Sugana, e minacciando Trento anche dall'est.

DEI SUCCESSI SULL 'ISONZO.

Milano, 2 luglio. — Le notizie piu' importanti che giungono oggi, riguarda i progressi fatti dagli Italiani lungo la val Chiesa, nel Trentino. Le posizioni avanzate Italiane sono ora tra Gondino e Castello, da dove le truppe Austriache furono sloggiate dopo un aspro combattimento. Castello e sulla strada che porta a Trento. Questa strada, importantissima, e' difesa, a 5 miglia a nord di Castello, dalla formidabile difesa di Lardaro, bombardata attualmente dall'artiglieria Italiana.

Gli Austriaci fanno dei disperati attachi per sloggiare gli Italiani dalle posizioni conquistate. Sono stati respinti, e gli Italiani hanno occupato delle nuove piu' avanzate positioni.

I cannoni tuonano giornalmente a Trieste. Gli Austriaci sono in uno stato di panico indescrivibile, ma allo stesso tempo terrorizzano la citta' quasi completamente disertata dagli Italiani.

Le provvigioni sono scarse, e le autorita' non si mostrano per nulla preoccupate che una popolazione di circa 100,000 persone, che an cora risiede a Trieste, sta affrontando la fame.

La Presa di Civarone

L'attacco degli Austriaci a Carzano fu respinto con l'aiuto delle truppe che han conquistato monte Civarone. In ogni dove, nel Trentino, i duelli di artiglieria si sono intensificati. Folche' le artiglierie italiane sono portate sempre piu' vicino alle fortificazioni, gli Italiani possono replicare effettivamente al fuoco che viene dal forti.

Pino a che le fortificazioni non saranno distrutte, certo i progressi non potranno essere che lenti.

EXPECT GERMAN NOTE MONDAY

BERLIN, July 2.—As the result of this week's conferences on drafts of the German reply to the American note, it is now in the hands of Emperor William at army headquarters.

The Emperor's decision is expected in time so that the note can be presented to James W. Gerard, the American ambassador, probably on July 5 or 6.

High officials are endeavoring to bring about a friendly settlement of the questions with America, and there is every reason to believe that they are anxious to make the proposals as conciliatory and acceptable as possible.

These officials, however, have to reckon with the force of strong public opinion which undoubtedly will oppose anything savoring of complete acquiescence in the American proposals. This force is being skilfully exploited by those who are opposed to all concessions.

Friends of a settlement are working under these circumstances with considerable difficulty, and the note probably will represent a compromise not in accordance with their desires.

Swedish Ships Sunk in Attack on Windau

STOCKHOLM, July 2. — Several Swedish ships in the harbor of Windau, Russia, are reported to have been sunk when that port was bombarded by German warships.

President May Prolong Stay in New Hampshire

By A. M. JAMIESON.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

CORNISH, N. H., July 2.—President Wilson today found the latest official advices from Washington so reassuring that he took under consideration the question of prolonging his vacation for a week or more.

Inclement weather again made golf impossible today, so the President buckled down to work in his study immediately after breakfast.

Late in the morning he took a brisk walk.

President Wilson has not yet begun work on the proposed note to Great Britain relative to shipping interference and probably will not until he returns to Washington.

General Tokaroff Killed in Charge

By International News Service.

FIERCE FIGHTING ABOUT GORIZIA

By BRITTON D'ALLAIRE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, July 2.—Desperate fighting is in progress around Gorizia, on the Isonzo River, where the Italian troops are struggling to open the way to Trieste.

The Italians dominate the heights on the west side of the Isonzo, but the Austrians are making frequent attacks in attempts to dislodge them.

Reports received from the front today state that in the fighting of Wednesday alone the Austrians, repulsed in their attacks, left 1,200 dead on the slopes of the heights.

Turkish Mutineers Shot by Germans

By International News Service.

DEDEAGATCH, Bulgaria, July 2.—The mutinous outbreak in the Turkish army has not yet been quelled. Word was received here today that thirty-five Turkish officers who refused to obey their German superiors were taken to Constantinople in chains and several of them summarily shot.

U. S. NAVY MAY GET SEA SLEDS

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The Navy Department is considering the adoption of a type of speedy motor boat known as the sea sled, a modified form of the hydroplane, for use in scouting and defence against submarines. Boats of this type can be built with a guaranteed speed of fifty-five miles an hour and possible speed of sixty-one miles. They are said to be thoroughly serviceable in rough weather and can be built to carry thirty men.

The sea sled is shallow, with a hull of peculiar construction and skips over the water instead of cutting through it. A twenty-four-foot boat of this type tested by the navy has made thirty-six and one half miles an hour.

The plan under consideration is to provide a mother vessel for the flotilla large enough to carry a number of sea sleds. Those in favor of the plan say that about 200 of these boats could be built for the cost of a scout cruiser, and would be much more effective as a protection for the fleet. The Navy Department is working also on a plan for utilizing small dirigible balloons as scouts for the fleet.

WHY GOV. WALSH DID NOT AGAIN NAME TILLEY

Governor Walsh failed to re-appoint David F. Tilley to the State Board of Charity because the original supporters of Mr. Tilley were no longer in sympathy with his administration of affairs, according to a statement authorized today by Thomas H. Connelly, the Governor's secretary.

"The impression that the Governor failed to re-appoint Mr. Tilley because of his opposition to the Governor's plan for reorganization of the State Board of Charity should be denied for once and all," said Secretary Connelly.

"The interests that Mr. Tilley was supposed to represent on the State board and who supported him at the time of his first appointment have withdrawn their support from him. They urged the appointment of a successor to him, regardless of whom the successor might be. The Governor's office received far more protests against Mr. Tilley's re-appointment than messages favoring his re-appointment."

Secretary Connelly said that Dr. Robert M. Merrick of Dorchester, Mr. Tilley's successor, has been for twenty years a leading physician of Dorchester, is the father of five children and for upwards of twenty years has been actively interested in St. Mary's Infant Asylum and other charitable institutions.

Dr. Merrick was said to have been practically unanimously indorsed by the charities which Mr. Tilley was supposed to represent on the board.

With regard to Miss Frances G. Curtis, whose term has also expired, Secretary Connelly said: "If the Governor should appoint some person better fitted for the charitable work, I cannot see any necessity for comment."

Chicago's Alimony a Million a Year

CHICAGO, July 2.—Chicago's divorce mills ground out 2,458 divorces, 119 annulments of marriage and 37 decrees of separate maintenance in 1914, according to the first annual report of County Clerk Robert M. Switzer.

Against this were 38,897 marriage licenses for the same period. Thus the divorces were more than 10 per cent. of the marriages. Alimony estimated at $1,000,000 annually was awarded.

Baby in Home of Walter Johnson

WASHINGTON, July 2.—A brand new twirler has arrived in town. He weighs 8½ pounds. The stork dropped him at the home of Walter Johnson, the pitcher of the Washington American League team. Walter himself was in New York, where the Nationals are playing the Yankees, when the stork arrived. He hurried home.

Walter married a daughter of Representative Roberts of Nevada last August.

Pageant Postponed.

As there seems no likelihood of being able to hold a dress rehearsal at Tufts Oval this evening, the Saturday performance of the Somerville pageant will be postponed and tickets for Saturday afternoon will admit to a performance Tuesday evening. The pageant will be given at 2:30 and 8 p. m. Monday. A dress rehearsal has been called for Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Gave Up Cash 'Somewhere on Milk Street'

Carl Knutson, caretaker at the Middlesex School, Concord, will have a care the next time he comes to Boston and dallies with the matter of $547.50.

It was "somewhere on Milk street"—about as definite as the "somewhere in France" of the British War Office—that Knutson and the nice green and yellow bills and the shiny half dollar parted ways.

The parting was on May 5, and today, when Knutson went to Station 2, he found the trail pretty cold.

He drew the money from a Boston bank and was going to send it to Chicago to buy stock. In "some office on Milk street," and blessed if he thinks it was the postoffice—now he has taken a second look at the building—someone gave him a "money order" and a "receipt."

In the confusion of city life, Knutson lost the "receipt." He waited a week and then wrote to Chicago to see if the money had been received. Positively not. The old flimflam game, the Boston police opined today.

Anyway, two months is a long time to worry about $547.50.

'Dan' O'Flaherty Ex-Harvard Star Weds Next Week

"Dan" O'Flaherty, the former Harvard football player, has made application for a marriage license for himself and Miss Caroline B. Woods, a Springfield school teacher.

O'Flaherty's full name is Daniel V. O'Flaherty. He lives at No. 7 Howe street, Dorchester. He teaches school, the same occupation as that of his fiancee. They are the same age, too, twenty-eight. Her home is Springfield is at No. 190 Thompson street.

The wedding will take place next Tuesday evening at St. Margaret's rectory in Dorchester.

Auto Crash Kills Woman, Injures 9

NEW YORK, July 2.—One woman was killed and eight men and a woman were injured early today when two speeding automobiles collided at Bedford avenue and Hayward streets, Brooklyn. Mrs. Sarah Kaplan was killed instantly. The cars were passing at a high rate of speed at right angles to each other when one crashed into the centre of the other.

Frank's Sister Says Slaton Is Heroic

NEW YORK, July 2.—"Governor Slaton is the biggest and best man in the United States" said Mrs. Otto Stern, sister of Leo M. Frank. Expressing her gratitude to the former Governor of Georgia for commuting her brother's sentence to life imprisonment, Mrs. Stern added:

"The Governor acted courageously, for he knew his own life might be the forfeit. He is a glorious man."

Country Pedlers Must Be Licensed

The itinerant vendor who drives from town to town with his stock of goods in the old-fashioned, high-wheeled wagon comes under the ban of the new hawkers' and pedlers' law, and will be required to pay a license to the State, according to an opinion rendered to Harry Cummer Thure Hanson of weights and measures, by Attorney-General Attwill.

ZIONISTS HONOR MEMORY OF HERZL

The big convention of Zionists was brought to a successful close with the services in the Temple Adath Jeshurun, in Blue Hill avenue, in honor of the late Theodor Herzl, the famous Zionist who died eleven years ago.

Julius Meyer presided and over 400 listened to addresses on the life and work of the pioneer Zionist. Louis D. Brandeis was again hailed as Zion's pre-eminent leader, successor to Herzl. Rabbi P. Israel, Rabbi Joseph Jann of Pine Bluff, Max Schulman of Chicago, Rabbi Louis Goldberg of Norfolk, Va., and Dr. Schmarya Levin, ex-member of the Russian Douma, delivered the speeches.

The Young Judea Society concluded its convention sessions with the election for the ensuing year of the following officers: Chairman, Reuben A. Posner; secretary, David Schneeberg; honorary vice-presidents, Nathan Straus, Joseph Barondess and Rabbi Meyer Berlin.

STATE FAIR TRIP PARTY IS NAMED

Sergeant-at-Arms Pedrick announces the makeup of the State party that will go to San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Those who will go as accredited representatives of the State are Governor Walsh, his military aids, Captain Stearns and Major Casey; Senator Haigis of Montague, who will represent President Coolidge of the Senate; Speaker Cox of the House, Senators Fitzgerald of Dorchester and Eldridge of Somerville, Representatives Achin of Lowell, Hull of Great Barrington, Locke of Worcester and Edward F. McLaughlin of Boston, and Sergeant-at-Arms Pedrick.

The party will leave on a special car attached to the Federal Express Wednesday and will return in a month.

Wife of Wealthy Doctor Dies in 'Black Belt'

By International News Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 2.—Broken in health, her money gone, and her clothing in rags, Mrs. John Sinclair, the wife of a wealthy and socially prominent physician of Philadelphia, was found dead in a negro lodging house in the very heart of the resort's "Black Belt." Liquor—the police say she drank a quart of whiskey a day—is believed to have been the cause.

Mrs. Sinclair disappeared from the Sinclair cottage in Ventnor on June 24. Although her husband and family had searched for her and had called on the Atlantic City and Philadelphia detectives to aid them, nothing was learned of her whereabouts until a negro undertaker applied to the authorities for permission to bury the body, a "mulatto woman," in Potter's field.

AGED WIDOW IS BADLY BURNED

The police of Station 9 are investigating the injuries of Mrs. Maria Mullen, seventy years of age, a widow who lived alone on the third floor at No. 7 Texas street, Roxbury, and who was burned in her room.

Michael O'Brien, who rooms on the second floor, directly below Mrs. Mullen's room, heard a cry of "Fire!" from her room. He ran upstairs and, seeing smoke issuing from beneath the door, broke down the door and rushed in to find the aged woman on the floor, her clothing and the carpet about her a mass of flames.

He beat out some of the flames and with the assistance of other roomers carried the woman out of the fire, but she was dead before assistance could be given.

ATTEMPT LIFE OF GENERAL HUERTA

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Government officials today have wired orders to El Paso, Texas, for officials there to take every precaution to guarding the life of former President Huerta and his companions who are under arrest with him.

These orders follow an announcement by the confidential agent of the Carranza government at Washington that an attempt was made to assassinate Huerta as he was leaving the federal building at El Paso after conclusion of his examination.

The announcement says: "Huerta was walking arm in arm with Blanquet, Aldorete, one of his bodyguards, who is also under arrest for complicity with Huerta, when some unknown person hurled a heavy block of coal from a third-story window of the bank building, narrowly missing the ex-dictator.

"The progress of Huerta, Aldorete and his colleagues from the federal building after the postponement of the hearing was signalized by a hostile demonstration from the mixed crowd of Americans and Mexicans gathered about. Cries of 'Kill Huerta!' and 'Kill the assassin!' filled the air.

It is also announced here that General Fidelvalia, the Villa governor of Chihuahua, acting upon information from General Villa, has demanded the extradition of Huerta from the United States on the charge of murder.

Dispatches from El Paso say that General Huerta angrily denounced his arrest today, while he criticized the attitude of the United States Government toward Mexico and predicted that he would be freed on the charge of conspiring to violate the American neutrality laws.

"What right has the Washington government to give Villa all its moral support, allow him to buy munitions of war and then arrest an innocent patriotic Mexican who visits the border to see his daughter?" said Huerta. "If it is spite work which prompts the American government to take a hostile attitude toward me, I am surprised; if it is the law I do not understand it; if it is policy I characterize it as ridiculous."

Washington officials today are also giving their serious consideration on what measures can be adopted for the relief of Mexico City, where conditions approaching famine exist.

WILLARD TELLS WHY HE ROSE ABOVE THE HANDICAP OF HARD LUCK

By JESS WILLARD

(Copyright, 1915, by A. Merritt. All Rights Reserved.)

"I hit Soldier Kearns so hard that he's had a glass jaw ever since."

JUST when I thought things were going to break right for me, I got a bunch of jolts that nearly sent me back West for keeps. The Boxing Commission of New York State barred me from the ring for a year.

I can't see yet that I did anything wrong. You see, after I knocked Soldier White out in one round, the Buffalo Club thought me a pretty good card. So they matched me for a fight with Young Gould Davis, a big chap who had been winning fight after fight by knockouts.

I told them I wanted 25 per cent. of the gate receipts, but we finally agreed on 20 per cent. Well, Davis didn't wait for the fight with me, but waltzed down to New York and took on Soldier Kearns. The Soldier got in a lucky punch that put Davis down and out in the very first round.

It made no sense. I was after money, and I figured that Davis's defeat would hurt the house when we fought. So I wrote the Buffalo people that I had to have 25 per cent. now, and when they said no, I called the fight off.

Kearns looked like the boy to draw the crowd, so I signed up to meet Soldier in Madison Square Garden. The battle came close to being stopped. Only before the fight Kearns came out in a newspaper boxing column he said:

"I will lick Willard with the first punch I can. I will try to put him to sleep quickly as possible."

The sheriff got scotched and talked about stopping the game because I sounded like a "prize fight." But he didn't, and we climbed into the ring as per schedule.

I knocked Kearns out in the sixth round, which shows that it doesn't do to talk too much. The Soldier was all set up by his victory over Davis and started off like he was going to make mince meat of me. He had a way of tearing in with his head down, and so I used right upper cuts on him almost entirely.

In the very first round I dropped him, and as the bell sounded I staggered him again. In the third I sent him down for the count, but the bell saved him. His seconds had to drag him to his corner. I handed him a good deal of punishment in the fourth, so saw that I had the battle won.

Then I let up. I don't like to give punishment. It really hurts me to punch away at a man that I've whipped, and so I slowed up for a few rounds, meaning to let Kearns stay the limit if I could. But the crowd yelled and hissed and Tex Rickard's men up in Kearns' corner and howled, "Go after him, Soldier. He wants to quit!"

It made me mad, I can tell you. So when the eighth round opened I made a rush across the ring and let fly with a right. It caught the Soldier on the jaw, and he went down like he'd been hit with an ax. He was still asleep when the referee got through counting and I picked him up and carried him to his corner.

The Soldier has had a "glass jaw" ever since. That's why I don't like to use a free right-hand swing. With my weight and my strength, it makes too dangerous a blow.

The fight made me some reputation. The sporting writers agreed that I had some cleverness, also that I could certainly hit. And just then, when things looked a little bright for me, the boxing commission ruled me out for a year!

The Buffalo Club claimed that I had welshed on my contract because I had called off the fight with One-Round Davis. So there I was, just being recognized as a real fighter, and then told I couldn't fight in New York for a year.

Bing! Why, if I hadn't been so big I could have sat down and cried. No manager, no chance to go on fighting in the Big State, and nothing to do but sneak back home and say to my wife, "I'm a failure." It was while I was feeling this way that I sat down on a bench in Madison square one afternoon, and bumped into a fellow that did more for me than any man I ever met.

You could see he was a bum. It was a cold day, but he had on Summer clothes, the coat torn and the pants all frazzled. His nose was the size and color of a big ripe plum, and his face had whiskey blotches all over it.

We got to talking, and I could see that he was a chap with a fine education. First thing I knew I was telling all my troubles, and wagging my head like I'd lost everything in the world. He sat there smiling, and when I got through he started talking.

"I can see that you don't read," he said. "You haven't got anything to go on but your own little experience, and the things that happen to you today. It's a good idea to know what happened yesterday, for it gives you a line on what may happen tomorrow."

I can't give what he said in his own words, for there was a lot of it then that got away from me. But I guess he was half-way joshing at the start, for he talked about kings and generals as though they had something to do with a broke fighter out of a job.

"If you knew history," he grinned, "you'd know that all the big guys had their troubles. They were big because they didn't quit. Napoleon was starving in a garret half before he got started on his climb. They had kicked him out of the army and he was a joke.

"U. S. Grant was a grocery clerk at thirty-nine. He'd drifted out of the army into first one job and then the other, and when the war broke out he was almost on the ragged edge of nothing at all. In three years he was a general, and after that President of the United States.

"Columbus was a beggar, going around from place to place with his hand out. The Queen of Spain had a bunch that he wasn't as crazy as people thought, and sent for him. But before he could come she had to buy him some clothes to cover his nakedness.

"George Washington looked like a dead one at Valley Forge. His men were starving. The British had cornered him and it looked like any day might see old George dangling at the end of a rope. But just when the British were getting the gallows ready, Washington put over his knockout punch.

"Frederick the Great, the biggest fighter that Germany ever had, got so up against it one time that he carried poison with him to die. But just when it seemed all day with old Frederick, he got a new start and made his enemies drop dead from hard running."

"I was born on a farm, weren't you?" he asked.

"Yep," I said.

"I reckoned the bucket of milk or the load of wood used to get pretty heavy, didn't it? But you kept on carrying 'em day after day, and your muscles got bigger and bigger as the loads. And that's the same awful heavy at first got kinda light.

"That's what troubles do for you. They give muscle to your brain and your will power. If you'd quit after the first heavy load you carried, you'd have an arm today no bigger than a toothpick. The fellow that quits after the first failure stays in the baby class."

He wasn't grinning any more, and he put out his bird-claw hand and felt my arm.

"What right have you got to be discouraged?" he said. "You've got health and strength and your youth! Look at me!"

He pointed at his bleared eyes, his purple nose and his ragged pants.

"When I had my first run of hard luck," he said, "I turned to whiskey. I wanted to feel good again. Whiskey does it for a while. It makes you feel that you're a fine fellow, and that you'd be a king or a millionaire if you could only get what was coming to you.

"Whiskey made me forget my troubles, but it also made me forget my ambition. When I started out to climb up again I found that I had lost my punch. That made me feel bad, and I went back to whiskey to feel good again.

"And there you are," he said. "Down and out."

"Why don't you quit?" I said.

"Forget it," he said. "You can't quit when you get where I am."

That talk did a lot of good to me. If I hadn't met that fellow I might have got to hanging around saloons, telling about my hard luck, and getting to be a good-for-nothing lobster. When I walked out from that bench I was giving myself a lot of swift kicks.

The very next day I packed my little grip and bought a ticket for Chicago. If New York couldn't have me, well, there was the rest of the country to work in. My drunken pal was right. When a fellow's got his health and strength and has never touched booze he's due to talk about "hard luck."

I made money for the first time getting over $2,500 for the two fights. Happy? Say, all the boose in the world couldn't have made me feel as good as when I sent that money home to the wife and children.

(Tomorrow Willard will write about Jake Kubis, saved from gamblers and a frame-up that cost a man $12,000.)

A CONDUCTOR HAD TRIED THEM ALL

Medicine Did Not Seem to Help Him Until He Tried Plant Juice.

Changing conditions have made all of us more or less susceptible to stomach disorders, and its kindred affections. Civilization has forced people to get rich food reinforced appetizing by stimulants, to live in nearly cities and to never walk when they can ride. No wonder they are susceptible to stomach ailments, which act like a fire-brand on the entire system, with first effects upon the kidneys, liver and intestines all become infected. Plant Juice, the herbal stomach remedy, supplies the body with the natural inorganic salts, which destroy the poison germs and build up the natural tissues.

Many incidents where remarkably quick results have followed the use of this remedy are being cited daily by local people in newspaper journals. Recently the following statement was made by Mr. R. E. Titus, who resides at 131 Harvard Avenue, Allston, Mass. Mr. Titus is well known here, being employed by the Boston Elevated Railway Company as conductor. He stated:

"For the two years past I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia. I would become very dizzy and had sick headaches. I had tried various remedies and none of them seemed to help me until I commenced to take Plant Juice. I have been using your medicine now for the past three weeks, and I can truthfully state that I am now not any kind of food and it agrees with me. My liver, which had become very torpid, is now in fine condition. I sleep the night through and the nervousness has entirely disappeared. I am recommending your medicine to all of my friends, for it does and you claim for it."

Any Plant Juice man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

On Saturday he will remain at the store until 10 P. M. to meet those unable to call during the day.—Advertisement.

THE CONTEST PLAN

Each day, for 85 consecutive days, a picture will be printed in the Daily and Sunday American. Contestants must supply each picture with a Play Title. The Play Title List will be found in the Boston American each morning. Contestants must number their coupons and, in submitting the greatest number of such "most fitting and appropriate" titles, will win the first award. The next greatest number will win the second award, etc.

There will be no book of titles to buy. An official List of Play Titles will appear each week in the Sunday American during the contest. This List will be the official guide for the following week's pictures. Titles appearing in the Sunday List will be used exclusively with each Sunday Official List Publication, and all titles appearing in the Sunday List will be used. Contestants may use the same Play Title for more than one picture.

SANBORN WALKS STREETS OF CONCORD, DEFYING ALL FOES

Frank B. Sanborn, the "Sage of Concord," was not haled into the Concord District Court today as expected, despite the fact that court officials admitted a warrant was issued against him charging contempt of court for failing to answer to the sewer complaint.

Mr. Sanborn was up early and walked through the streets of the historic town unmolested by process servers whom he defied with dignified indifference last night by quietly returning from Portsmouth, N. H., and seeking the comforts of his home on Elm street. He boarded a train before noon for Boston and court adjourned for the day without development in the case that has stirred national interest because of the prominence of the eighty-three-year-old philosopher and abolitionist.

READY TO MAKE ARREST.

Clerk Edward J. Loughlin admitted a warrant had been issued, but did not know what would be done. Chief Craig didn't know that Mr. Sanborn had returned last evening until notified by the newspapermen. It was hinted by an official in the case that the authorities had decided to proceed against Mr. Sanborn on the renewed complaint with caution in order not further to aggravate public opinion.

"We shall endeavor," said this official, "to have Mr. Sanborn's friends induce him to appear in court without formal arrest, if possible, but if he refuses and remains in the jurisdiction arrest may be necessary."

Mr. Sanborn's home-coming was not announced. It was not spectacular. It was attended by the quiet dignity that marks all of Mr. Sanborn's movements. He wrote a letter to Mrs. Sanborn from New Hampshire and arrived punctually. Purely by chance, the night policeman who meets every train did not happen to notice Mr. Sanborn from where the former stood in rubber coat and boots and with helmet dripping, talking with two citizens when the 8:02 train rolled in from Boston in a pelting rain last evening.

WALKED TO HIS HOME.

Nor did an AMERICAN reporter who had been watching every train for four hours. Few were at the station owing to the storm and it was dark. Mr. Sanborn left the train from a coach and took a short cut to the road.

In spite of his eighty-three years the "Sage" is some walker. He made the distance between the depot and his home in little less than a minute behind the reporter, whose hobby is walking. The writer feared Mr. Sanborn might have come by automobile and he hurried for the Sanborn home not more than four minutes' walk away.

The AMERICAN reporter had just pulled the Sanborn bell when he heard a footstep on the farther end of the veranda. A figure, tall and stooped, but wonderfully lithe and active, came into view.

"Mr. Sanborn?"

"Yes! But who is this, please?" If the returning philosopher and supposed fugitive feared the stranger on the porch to be a warrant-server, his cheerful voice did not betray it. He had left Portsmouth early in the afternoon and had a brief wait-over in Boston.

GREETED BY WIFE.

And this spry young octogenarian had done something few young men would have attempted on such a night—spurned the station carriage and trudged out afoot with a stride worthy of a Weston.

His soft hat was soaked out of shape. It had allowed the water to trinkle down over his long white hair and to flatten his eyebrows and thin moustache. But he wasn't winded or excited the least bit. His keen eyes, in the half light from the windows on the porch, beamed with mingled curiosity and friendliness.

Through the door could be seen the sitting room where the wife of the home-comer waited for him. She had heard much during his absence. She had been visited and interrogated by reporters and by officials with papers that were strange to her, but she feared not. Through it all she has been buoyed by the conviction that her husband is right and she shares his indifference.

As the rain beat a tattoo on the veranda roof this dialogue ensued:

"What can I do for you, young man?" said Mr. Sanborn with a smile.

"Tell me something about the sewer fuss, please. Are you afraid of arrest? Do you consider yourself an exile?"

"Not so fast! Remember, I am not going to say a single word about this case. But I wish you would publish for me that the reports in a Boston morning newspaper quoting me are false. Tell your readers that I didn't see the reporter from that paper at all and that he invented what was published. I have not discussed this matter with any newspaper man and don't intend to.

"But I have been waiting all afternoon, Mr. Sanborn, watching every train, and it's wet and we're tremendously interested and so are the people at large. Won't you kindly say just a few words? Are you going into court on the new complaint?"

"Remember, not a word."

WAS AWAY ON BUSINESS.

"Will you remain at home? What are you plans?"

"Well, I shall attend to business in Boston tomorrow and—I must go in now."

"Are reports that you consider yourself an exile, true?"

"Here I am.

"Please now. No more questions. I must be excused. Sorry, but then I am tired. I have been traveling and am wet. Goodnight!"

From others in the household it was learned that Mr. Sanborn had gone to Portsmouth to attend to legal business for an aged client named Mrs. Parnum, for whom he has the power of attorney, although not a member of the bar. Mr. Sanborn was called on this business before the Concord authorities and the new complaint based on the same old charge that District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex county, not pressed.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"SHE'LL tell you next," said Tommy, "that I locked the door and put the key in my pocket."

He spoke with so much scorn and assurance that Gunsdorf hesitated, and turned toward his wife.

"It's just what he did do," she said; "he locked the door and put the key in his pocket."

Tommy's hands dropped into the pocket of his jacket and his right hand closed upon the door key. He did not need to speak. His face told the story. Slowly he withdrew the key from his pocket and tossed it onto the thread-bare carpet.

"This looks bad, Gunsdorf," he said, "but if you'll listen to me."

"I will listen to you in hell," said Gunsdorf. "Take him, boys."

Gunsdorf's three friends came slowly forward.

"They're going to kill me if they can," thought Tommy; "and I don't want to be killed."

He drew a long breath and clenched his fists.

"Don't kill him," cried Mrs. Gunsdorf suddenly; "not yet!"

"Why not yet?" growled Gunsdorf.

"Because, you fool, if you kill him here—in my room—people will think"——

"What will they think?"

"They will think—oh, don't make me say it."

Gunsdorf began to scratch the back of his head.

"That is true," he said presently. "We had better take him away somewhere. For now we will tie him. When it is dark we will take him away somewhere in a carriage. We will take with us also a stick of dynamite. A stick of dynamite with a lighted fuse makes a fine gag to go into a man's mouth. It keeps him quiet forever."

"You don't need to take him away," said Mrs. Gunsdorf; "there's a fine strong elm tree in front of the house. Take him downstairs, call in the boys, and read them the telegram he's got in his inside pocket. Nobody need mention me—and the boys'll do the rest. The dirty spy!"

Gunsdorf and his three friends closed in upon Tommy from three sides. Mrs. Gunsdorf crept stealthily along the wall to take him in the rear.

"Gunsdorf," said Tommy suddenly, "just read that telegram. You can't hang a man on that. It's from the man who adopted me and brought me up. We differed because I am on the side of labor. He says he wants to see me on important business. That doesn't make me a spy, does it? Be reasonable."

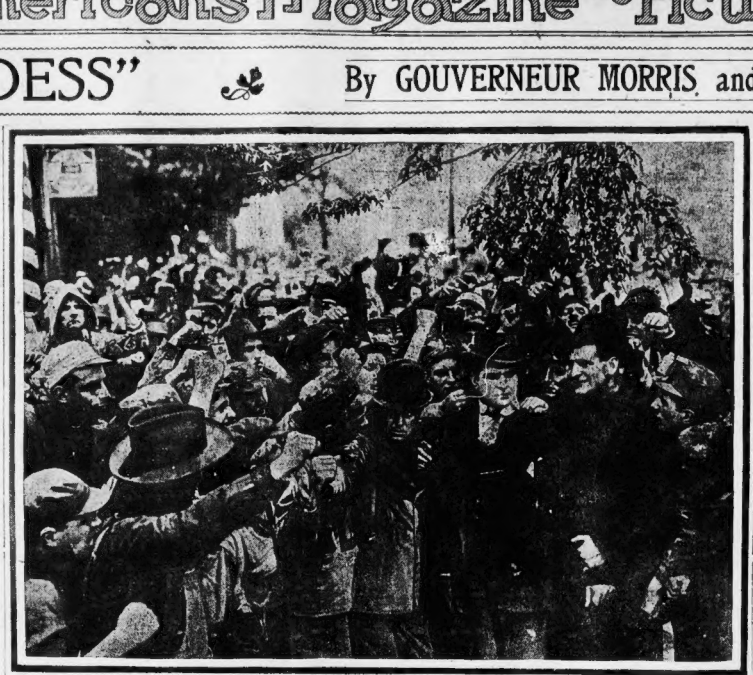
Ordinarily, for Gunsdorf had an intelligent mind, he would have placed a just value upon the telegram as evidence against Tommy. Just now his reason was blinded by jealous rage. It is doubtful if he even read the telegram. He crumbled it in his hand and thrust it into his trousers pocket.

At that moment, seeing that the affair had passed beyond reason and debate, Tommy stepped quickly forward and lifted Gunsdorf clean from the floor with a terrific right hand blow under the point of the chin. Swift as lightning he turned and struck the nearest of Gunsdorf's friends between the eyes.

This cleared the way to the door, and he sprang toward it, but only to fall heavily on his face, for Mrs. Gunsdorf had grappled him from behind about the ankles.

A minute later they had overpowered and tied him hand and foot.

Fifteen minutes later Tommy stood on the top of a step-ladder, surrounded by an enraged mob of men and women who showered vile epithets upon him. The step-ladder stood immediately under the limb of a great elm tree. With this limb Tommy was loosely connected by a length of quarter-inch hemp rope. Other ropes had been attached to the foot of the ladder upon which he stood, so that at a signal it could be yanked suddenly from under him.



Tommy, seized by the mob, realizes that his life is in danger.

Tommy was not frightened. He was dazed from rough handling, and somehow he couldn't believe that they really meant to hurt him. It was merely an unpleasant dream from which he would presently awaken safe in bed. Then his roaming eyes met Gunsdorf's. Gunsdorf no longer looked strong and terrible, but shrunken and puzzled. His eyes blinked with great rapidity. Presently, Tommy caught sight of Mrs. Gunsdorf. He shook his head gently at her, as much as to say, "You know you really ought not to be such a story-teller."

She covered her eyes with her hands, as if she could not bear the sight of his mildly accusing eyes.

It was only very gradually that the truth dawned on him, and a great lump rose in his throat and pressed against the rope which encircled it. Yes. They were going to kill him.

He began to think of her intentionally, with all his wit. If he had to die, at least it should be with gracious and loving thoughts.

So great was his concentration that the crowd surrounding him seemed to grow vague and misty, and he actually seemed to see her—in her white dress with the band of jewels across her dark hair—and the vague, misty crowd was falling away before her to right and left and she was coming swiftly toward him.

Engaged to Two Men at Once

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"HOW happy I could be with either, were t'other dear charmer away," wrote the poet, and we who read smile with amused tolerance. But the situation is not amusing at all. Either it is a tragedy of imperfections, a drama of deceit, or a distorted problem of stolen happiness.

"I have two young men friends," writes Polly. "One lives in the same city as I, the other out of town. I am desperately in love with both of them. And I am sure they both love me, as they have both proposed. I accepted both. The reason was I loved both so well I was afraid I would make a wrong choice. I thought I would be able to decide in a year which I loved the best. But now they both want to marry this Fall and I don't know which to take. Please advise me quickly as I am in great need of help. I am eighteen, and both the men are over twenty-five."

Polly—aged eighteen—what you are really in need of is a spanking. Suppose you accept the verbal one from me.

You have done a thing that is contemptible and abhorrable. You have lowered your womanhood by deceiving two men—and you are likely to lower their standard of womanhood when they find you out. When you were with either he became temporarily the one you loved—and so, when you went to the other, you betrayed the man you had just thought you loved.

The standard of love for decent folk is to love one only and to cleave to him or her. And since you think you love two men you love neither—but instead you have a morbid desire to be made love to! You love yourself, my girl; you love to have two men sue and court and worshipped. And so you have supplied yourself with two admirers, and stimulated your own loneliness of conquest.

What would you think of a man who similarly deceived two women? Chivalrous folk would think "cad" too kind a name for him. And even "scoundrel" would seem to gloss over the situation of taking the love and allegiance of two women and of laying up for one (or both) unhappiness when the day of awakening came.

The fact that you are a girl makes what you have done no whit more decent than would be the conduct of a man who acted with similar shamelessness. In fact—it is worse. You have cheapened your own womanhood and all the stands of sweetness and reserve and modesty that ought to be the loveliest thing in your youth.

You are playing fast and loose with the most sacred emotion in life. Ahead of you lie sacredness of home making. Since your promise is divided between two it is valueless to either. Theoretically you have violated the principles of home and the sanctity of marriage.

You think I am taking a girlish prank very seriously, don't you? Well, your "girlish prank" can't fail to cost one man his happiness and illusions about the woman he thought of sacredly. And the one man who marries you—if either is so foolish now—is fairly sure always to remember that you are capable of deceit and duplicity.

Make your confession now to each—don't wait to be found out—as discovered you surely will be; but have the one shred of grace of decency acknowledge what you have done. If either man can find it in his heart to forgive you; if you can feel humility enough to desire to spend your life in making for one cruel duplicity; if you can feel shame at your ignoble act, then marry. But the safest thing for you to do—is to realize that you are not at all in love with either, but just fascinated by love. And then wait humbly for the miracle of real love to come into your life.

And may all other flighty little girls who play at love and play with love profit by your silliness.

Their Married Life

Warren Takes a Dislike to Helen's Self-Supporting, Old-Time Friend

Copyright, 1915, International News Service

"HERE comes Warren, now," announced Helen. "I am so anxious for you to meet him."

The woman who was seated in the big tapestry chair smiled at Helen's enthusiasm.

"I'm sure I'll be very glad to know him," she said in a low, attractive voice. "Doesn't it seem strange, Helen, that all these years have passed and you have a husband and a little daughter?"

Helen smiled reminiscently and Warren came into the room the next moment, newly shaved and alert and virile looking. Helen felt justifiably proud and showed it in the introduction she made.

"Warren, dear, this is an old school friend of mine from St. Louis. She is doing newspaper work. Miss Knowles, my husband."

Warren acknowledged the introduction with a hearty greeting.

"When did you come in this city?" he asked genially.

"I have been here for some time, but I had no idea Helen was here. We lost track of each other long ago."

"Do you enjoy newspaper work?"

"Yes, very much indeed; it is certainly a fascinating game. I want Helen to come to see me at my studio where I write. I hope you will come, too."

Helen left the room with an excuse to see about dinner. Frances Knowles had been a great friend of hers when they were girls, and she wondered curiously into what kind of a woman she had developed. Frances had always possessed a certain attraction, although she had never been pretty. But her auburn hair and fair skin, and above all her dazzling smile and a certain way, wilful and fascinating, had always surrounded her with men.

And now she was a newspaper woman, fighting her way in the world. Frances had always had a ready wit and a desire to be independent. Helen had always supposed that women who were workers had a certain amount of grind attached to their responsibilities, but in this case it was certainly different.

Frances looked the well-groomed woman in every sense of the word. Her gray linen suit and her white hat were daintily feminine—she did not talk with any advanced ideas of feminism and the like, and yet there was a subtle difference, the difference between a woman who is married and the woman who is working out the problem of life for herself.

Helen wondered if she envied Frances as she busied herself with the little homely tasks that constituted the preparation of a meal. She watched her friend's graceful poise at this—her friend's first glimpse of her home life.

Helen was not without a touch of pride in her accomplishments in the holding together of the home. After all, there was no doubt about the fact that home-building was just as vitally important these days as was any kind of a trade.

"Nora, we'll have the strawberry shortcake, and this grapefruit salad, and the iced bouillon first. I guess that's all, and have dinner promptly at 6.30."

Helen slipped out of her apron and returned to the living room to find Frances and her husband deep in a discussion as to whether a college education was necessary to the successful business man of the present. Warren did not look up as she entered, neither did Frances offer to include her in the conversation, so Helen had a good chance to study her friend and her husband at close range.

Frances was very sweet as she talked vivaciously. Her cheeks were pink and she made little movements with her hands for emphasis. Warren was arguing coldly, with the slightly satirical expression on his face that was always present when he was sure of his ground.

Nora announced dinner and Frances turned to Helen eagerly, anxious to have her course championed, and from then on the conversation was general. Frances praised the dinner and all the dainty little appointments that Helen was so particular about. When it came time for her to leave, Warren suggested that they take her home, but she refused to allow such a thing.

"Why, I run all over the city alone and think nothing of it," she protested laughingly. And after extracting a promise from Helen to look her up soon, she finally departed.

"Well, dear, what do you think of her?" said Helen as they went back into the living room.

"I don't know," returned Warren, irritatingly. "She is a pretty woman and evidently knows her own mind."

"Don't you like her?"

"I don't know as one is so all fired attractive."

"That's funny. I thought you were awfully interested."

"Just because I argued with her?"

"Well, you did look interested, besides, men always like her."

"Well, she's all right, but I can't say much for women of that type."

"She's out doing things."

"Not the right things. A woman ought to get married, that's her business. I'm for the old-fashioned woman every time."

Last year America produced 795,000 more motor vehicles than in the previous twelve months. The total number registered was 1,868,441—from which the receipts were $11,926,295.56—as against 1,127,949 in 1913.

The French Government, through the Minister of War, approved by the Health Dept., ordered 200,000 boxes Cadum Ointment for use in the Army and Navy.

If you have skin trouble, get a 10c. box of Cadum Ointment at once and apply a small quantity to the affected part. It will stop the itching at once. People who have suffered for years from irritation of the skin are comforted and able to sleep soon after Cadum Ointment is applied. It acts quickly upon eczema, pimples, sores, blotches, eruptions, scaly skin, itching piles, ringworm, chafings, etc. Cadum Ointment is sold by druggists at 10c. & 25c. a box.

HOW TO HEAL SKIN-DISEASES

A Baltimore doctor suggests this simple, but reliable and inexpensive, home treatment for people suffering with eczema, ringworm, rashes and similar itching, burning skin troubles.

At any reliable druggist's get a 25c jar of resinol ointment and a cake of resinol soap. These will not cost a bit more than seventy-five cents. With the resinol soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly, until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on a thin layer of the resinol ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the distressing itching and burning stop with the first treatment, and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again.—Advertisement.

The Bogy Man in Story

WHENCE came the word "Bogy?" It is said by some to be a corruption of the name of "Bo" or "Boh," a Northern hero, son of Odin. Apparently there really was a Gothic warrior of the name, in honor of whom "Bo!" was used as a battle-cry, the sound of which struck terror into the peasant-folk whose lands were invaded by the wild Goths and Normans.

To this day in some parts of Holland women frighten their children with the name of "Bo!" In Ireland naughty young folks are often threatened with the "Boo-man" or the "Bugaboo!" In this case the word probably comes from a Celtic source. The Scottish people speak of a "Bogle," and the Welsh of a "Bwg," both of which mean a goblin.

In the Isle of Man there are tales of evil spirits called "bugganes;" in Eastern Europe the Russians call a goblin "Buka;" and in Bulgarian "Bog" means a god.

In "Orlando Furioso" one of the allies of Charlemagne is "Bogio." In Shakespeare's time "bug" was a common word for a goblin or evil spirit. In "Hamlet" we read of "bugs and goblins," and in "Henry the Sixth" King Edward says—"For Warwick was a bug that feared us all." Spenser, too, speaks of "a ghastly bug," but it does not seem very clear when or why the name was transferred from a goblin or evil spirit to the unpleasant insect which now bears it.

During the Crusades, Turkish and Saracen mothers frightened their children with the name of Richard Coeur-de-Lion, while Christians had for their bugbears Mahomet and Saladin and the warlike leaders of the Moors in Spain. Mathias Corvinus, the King of Hungary, was the terror of the "young Turks" of his day.

"Black Douglas," the hero of so many Scottish songs and legends, was greatly feared by his adversaries, and children on the English side of the border were terrified at the mere mention of whom "Jock" was used as a battle-cry, the sound of which struck terror into the peasant-folk whose lands were invaded by the wild Goths and Normans.

Not at Home

Counsel for the Plaintiff—And so on the twelfth day of the month you called on Mr. Wilkinson? Now, what did Mr. Wilkinson say to you?

Counsel for the Defendant—I objected to that question.

The question was debated for half an hour and was allowed by the Judge.

"Now, witness," said the counsel for the plaintiff triumphantly, "on the twelfth of the month you called on Mr. Wilkinson. What did he say to you?"

Witness—"He wasn't at home."

FRECKLE FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a change. Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable druggist that it will not cost a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any of the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, or any druggist, and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as that is the only preparation sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

BECKER OFFERS POLICE GRAFT EXPOSE

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 2.—It was learned today that Charles Becker offered to make revelations to Governor Whitman in connection with graft in New York police circles, to get a commutation of his death sentence for instigation for the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

The Governor, however, refused to consider that phase of the case, holding that the only issue before him was the action killing of Rosenthal.

Save for the statement that Becker had not confessed the killing or offered to implicate others in the killing, the Governor would say nothing regarding offers of revelations by the convicted man.

Martin T. Manton, Becker's counsel, was asked if he would mention the names of six men, said to have been offered to the Governor on behalf of Becker, who are said to have shared in the so-called graft.

"Under no circumstances," was the reply.

WILL NOT CONFESS.

Mr. Manton said the case would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court, but it probably would be by some lawyer other than himself.

Manton today will make a full statement of all that took place in the Governor's office. According to Attorney Johnson, Manton's assistant, Becker will make no confession under any circumstances, regardless of the results.

"I saw Becker at Sing Sing, and he feels as he always has felt," said Johnson.

"He is hopeful, but it is not the hopefulness of stupidity. It is an imperative hope. He believes this thing cannot take place. He insists something will turn up to save him."

"Is there anything now that can save him outside of the United States Supreme Court?" was asked.

"Nothing can save him but the federal court,' was the lawyer's reply. "The case will be taken there. I am not certain, but I believe we will continue the fight to that body."

ATTORNEY TO AID BECKER.

Hartford Marshall, formerly attorney for "Bridgie" Webber and afterward attorney for Becker at his first trial, today asserted he had a story to tell and that he intended to take it to Justice Bartlett of the Court of Appeals, the only justice who listened when the court refused to grant Becker a third trial in the last appeal.

"I am not going to let this man go to his death if I can help it," Mr. Marshall asserted. "I am not going to let him die with what I know unsaid.

What Mr. Marshall has to tell, it is asserted, he learned when he was counsel for Webber. It came straight from the gambler himself. He would not relate the details, but it is to the effect that Webber confided to him that Becker was "clean as a whistle" in the Rosenthal killing.

Queen Elizabeth Leads in Fierce Attack on Forts

ATHENS, July 2.—The allies opened a fierce assault on the Turkish positions before Krithia Wednesday morning. Eight warships, led by the superdreadnought Queen Elizabeth, are pounding the Turkish forts with the greatest crash of metal since the attack on Fort Kilid Bahr, more than three months ago. Unconfirmed reports reached here last night that Krithia had fallen.

Dip of Death Ruse Used in Air Battle

Laura Brigham, Reporter for 36 Years, Dead

Miss Laura Muzzey Brigham, one of the oldest women reporters in the land, is dead at her home in East Lexington at the age of seventy-nine, lacking nineteen days. For the past two years she was nearly blind, being able to see only large objects. But she quickly kept in the newspaper "game."

Her work was "covering" East Lexington for a Lexington paper, a task at which she labored faithfully and accurately for thirty-six years. Even when she could not see to read her own writing she would not quit, but wrote by touch."

Her health began to fail four years ago, but she stuck to her work up to a month ago. Inflammation of the heart membrane was the immediate cause of death.

Miss Brigham came from Revolutionary stock. She attended Bradford Academy, the oldest female seminary in the land. She taught Sunday school twenty-three years, knew Ralph Waldo Emerson, Louisa Alcott and other literary notables.

Yardsticks to Be Put to the Test

State Commissioner Thure Hanson of weight and measures today turned his energies to the elastic yardstick and the furniture store. By order of Mr. Hanson, his inspectors will make a round of all furniture stores to ascertain if the yardsticks used in measuring carpets, linoleums and the like are actually twelve inches to the foot and three feet to the yard. Preliminary inspections have convinced him that in some cases the buyer is not getting all he pays for.

MISS GARDNER TO BE JULY BRIDE

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge's grand daughter, Constance Gardner, only daughter of Colonel and Augustus P. Gardner, to be a fall bride, it was announced today. She will be married at the latter's summer house in Hamilton July 31 to Grafton Will mot Minot until recently an attache to the United States Embassy in Berlin.

The announcement of the approaching ceremony came with no little surprise to all except the intimate friends of the young couple. Mr. Minot, who was graduated from Harvard only last year, had just returned from Berlin.

The ceremony will unite two of the oldest families in the State. Minot is the son of Mrs. J. Grafton Minot, nee Miss Honora L. Temple Wentworth of the old Massachusetts Winthrop family, of the Brattle Street Church, who once married Josh Billings, another Miss Gardner. Besides the Senator and Colonel Gardner, the bride's mother was Miss Constance Lodge, the Senator's daughter, and through the Lodges of New England Puritan descent and the Winthrops of Pilgrim. Her father, a graduate of Harvard and Columbia Law School, has been in New York.

Miss Gardner is a great debutante and came out in 1913 at a ball given in her honor by Senator Lodge at the Lodge home. It was one of the most elaborate functions of the kind ever held in Boston. The long list of guests included many from the diplomatic service and the wealth and society of the States.

JOE RIVERS IS REAL RING STAR

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE are few ring lovers who are better judges of boxers than Californians. They have had an opportunity to see most of the world's leading glove men perform in twenty-round contests. Ten-round no-decision bouts are a great little institution, but it takes a twenty-round decision battle to decide the superiority of two evenly matched men.

Californians have placed their stamp of approval on Joe Rivers. He is a Los Angeles boy and first gained fame fighting west of the Sierras. Rivers has met most of the star men in his boxing class. Willie Ritchie, Joe Mandot, Ad Wolgast, "Knockout" Brown, Leach Cross and Willie Beecher have all opposed this shifty, hard-hitting, twenty-three-year-old youth who is rated as the greatest Mexican boxer we have had since the days of Aurelio Herrera.

Herrera made a grand record during his career in the ring. He was a real fighter, as he proved in his contests with Battling Nelson, Abe Attell, Young Corbett, Young Erne, Young Corbett and "Kid" Goodman.

BOB LAGA, manager of Rivers, is so confident that the Mexican will win in his twelve-round bout with Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea, which will be staged at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night, that he called at this office the other day and in discussing Rivers' ring feats said:

"Joe is fighting at top speed just now, and I believe that he will dispose of Gallant. The Mexican is a great fighter. He combines boxing skill and speed with terrific hitting power. This makes a wonderful combination and it is a mighty difficult one to beat.

"Rivers never held the world's lightweight championship, but he was deprived of this honor in his bout with Ad Wolgast, which was staged in Vernon, Cal., on July 4, 1912. Wolgast was given the decision on a foul in thirteen rounds, but in my opinion Rivers knocked out the Michigan "Wildcat." I am in possession of pictures which bear out my contention.

"THE Wolgast-Rivers bout had a dramatic ending. The men had been fighting breast to breast for the greater part of the contest. In the thirteenth session Wolgast hit Joe below the belt just as the Mexican was shooting a right-hand punch for the champion's jaw. Rivers did not "pull" his punch. Instead it landed flush on Wolgast's jaw. Both boxers fell to the mat together. Wolgast being knocked out by Joe's right-hand punch, while the latter was unable to stand up as a result of the foul blow delivered by the title holder. The referee, however, declared that it was Rivers and not Wolgast who delivered the foul blow.

"I am sure that Rivers will make a big hit with Boston ring fans. If Rivers wins from Gallant, I will not hesitate in matching him for a bout with Charley White, Freddy Welsh or any of the other star lightweights, to be staged in this city."

Hagen Wins Golf Championship; Brady Is Second

WINNERS OF THE EIGHT PRIZES.

1—Walter C. Hagen, Rochester, N. Y.	$150
2—Michael J. Brady, Wollaston	100

5—C. H. Hoffner, Woodbury, N. J.	35
6—Tom Anderson, Montclair, N. J.	20
7—Patrick J. Doyle, Myopia	10
8—Louis Tellier, Canoe Brook, and Alec Campbell, Baltimore, split	5
Total	$435

Walter J. Hagan is open golf champion of Massachusetts as a result of his card of 288 for 72 holes at the Country Club. M. J. Brady of Wollaston was second with 293, Gilbert Nichols turned in 304, G. M. Barnes 308, C. H. Hoffner 310, Tom Anderson 311, P. J. Doyle 315 and Louis Tellier and Alec Campbell came in the money with 316.

Francis Ouimet scored 308 and won plate, worth $50.

Hughie Jennings Wants Schang

DETROIT, July 2.—Hughie Jennings is after Schang, catcher of the Athletics, and the chances are that within a day or two a definite offer for him will be made to Connie Mack. No official word of Mack's intentions regarding the further disintegration of the 1914 championship machine has been received," declared Jennings. "However, if Mack intends to put Barry, Schang and some of the other veterans on the block, we shall enter with a bid. It will be a bid of cash or players, or both. Schang would fit in pretty well with the Detroit team."

Herzog Will Not Be Sold or Traded

CINCINNATI, July 2.—Manager Charles Herzog is not for sale nor is he on the market to be traded, according to President August Herrmann, of the Cincinnati club. When shown a dispatch quoting President Thomas of the Cubs as saying that he had a "chance to get" Herzog, President Herrmann said: "That is a joke. There is absolutely nothing to it. I do not knew where President Thomas got his information, but I can say that in this instance, he has been wholly misinformed. Herzog is not for sale or trade."

Willard Indorses Boxing Commission.

Despite his treatment by the New York Boxing Commission, which debarred him for one year, Jess Willard thinks every State should have such a regulating body.

In tomorrow's chapter of his autobiography in the AMERICAN, the champion tells of several rank fakes in boxing matches which could not have been pulled off had there been a boxing commission in the State where the "fight" took place.

The Fitzsimmons - Sharkey go, which he calls "the most disgraceful fake in the history of the American ring," is described in detail. It exonerates Fitzsimmons completely.

COLLINS-DIDIER TO BEAT LINART

Another one-hour motor-paced race is on the cards for the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night, with Victor Linart, the star of the Golden Wheel contest, in the chief role. Linart's opponents this time will be Elmer Collins, Leon Didier and Georges Seres.

Collins is the only American rider to hold a victory over Linart, and Seres is the only other rider who has beaten the Belgian this season.

Both of these races were ridden at Sheepshead Bay, New York, however, the Belgian having yet to lose a race at the beach oval.

Collins declared yesterday that no less an Wiley and Carman were unable to conquer Linart Wednesday night, he felt it his duty to uphold the prestige of the American pace followers, and he expressed confidence in his ability to do so. What tickles Collins most is that he will have a chance to beat the whole foreign delegation in one evening.

Another attempt will be made to lower the mark of forty-three miles and six laps set by Linart, Wednesday night, and incidentally to reach the coveted goal of forty-five miles.

Didier is seeking revenge. He still believes he is the Belgian's master, and says he will prove it when they meet again tomorrow night. Didier led the Golden Wheel race for forty-four minutes, only to lose his grip after a terrific brush with Linart.

Seres is a greatly improved rider since he appeared here last. Ample proof of this may be obtained from the fact that he licked both Linart and Wiley in the same race in New York last week. Seres is acknowledged to be the greatest pace follower in the world, and he is likely to hand out a few mild surprises when he takes his post tomorrow evening.

Colonial League Changes Schedule

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 2.—President Coppen of the Colonial Baseball League announces the following changes in the schedule in the immediate future. The home games of Pawtuckets on July 6, 7 and 8 have been transferred to Hartford, and the games on July 9 and 10 have been transferred to Springfield. Hartford will play in New Bedford on July 5 and 16, New Haven and Taunton have an open date on July 9. Throughout the league every Saturday will be a double-header the balance of the season. In Taunton every Wednesday will be a double-header the balance of the season. Springfield will play at Hartford on July 12. If 1,500 fans do not respond to a Fall River and Missouri Day, July 3, the same on Saturday, July 10, will be played in New Haven instead of Fall River.

Kramer Beats Goullet in Two Wild Heats

NEWARK, N. J., July 2.—In two of the greatest rides ever seen at the Velodrome track here, Frank L. Kramer of East Orange defeated Alfred Goullet of Australia in straight heats. In each heat Kramer came through in the final eighth. In the first heat he equaled the track record for the eighth, 11 2-5s.

Gunboat Smith Loses.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Charley Weinert of Newark outfought Gunboat Smith of San Francisco in seven of the ten rounds in their open air bout at Ebbetts' Field. Weinert used a left jab effectively throughout the fight and had Smith bleeding after the sixth round.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the fifteenth of a series of articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Waist muscles cannot be kept on the jump too often or vigorously.

These waist muscles of yours are not yet quite enough limbered out, and your stomach will be the better for an additional surprise. That section between the breast-bone and the loins cannot be kept on the jump too often or vigorously.

Stretch out your arms sidewise as before, on a level with the shoulders; keep the chest full, and lifted upward. Now lean over sidewise to the right, as far as your circumstances permit, and a bit further, on second thoughts.

Your arms, however, must not move from their position relative to the upper part of the trunk; a line drawn from one to the other middle finger of your right and left hands must still pass through the centre of the chest. Oppose that tendency of the right arm to drop below the level of the shoulder. Do the movement as if you were a piece of solid wood from the top of the ribs upward—a cross that had a hinge in the middle of the shaft—a hinge that works sidewise, not forward.

By observing that rule you will stretch the left side of the body, from the hips upward till it forms a handsome curve, and the side muscle just above the hip bone will be drawn taut. At the same time the right side will be bent upon itself in a deep fold, and whatever portion of your viscera is inside the bend will get a hearty squeezing.

Press down hard, and hold the position for a moment. Be careful not to bend forward—only sideways. Your outstretched arms will add vigor to the movement, just as the handle of a hammer adds weight to the blow.

While I was sitting in the studio of a friend of mine one day, there entered a wealthy merchant, weighing about 250 pounds, who wanted his portrait painted; he was triple-chinned, and his girth at the waistband would be not under six feet. The pose was discussed, and the artist delicately hinted that a front view would minimize the abdominal protuberance.

"Not at all, sir," said the merchant; "paint me in profile; a salient abdomen adds dignity to the figure!"

That may be; but the faithful performance of the last two exercises would have ended by diminishing that sort of dignity by about two feet, and the life of the owner of the salience would have been prolonged several years. Dignity is a good thing, but there are other kinds of it than the abdominal, and less expensive.

New Track Champion to Oppose Meredith

NEW YORK, July 1.—Van Wilkie, the new senior metropolitan 440-yard champion, who equalled Maxey Long's track record of 49 2-5 seconds, is another of the fastest middle-distancers to be invited to start in the "Millrose-466-Invitation" at Celtic Park on Saturday, July 10.

Wilkie has promised that if he can change his vacation plans he will toe the mark against "Ted" Meredith, whom he forced to do 47 seconds in order to win the intercollegiate quarter-mile championship at Franklin Field.

Bay Wood Knocks Out Grover Hayes

TURNER'S FALLS, July 12.—Bay Wood of Fall River knocked Grover Hayes of Chicopee out of the ring in the tenth round of the main go before the Turner's Falls A. A., and as he failed to respond to the count Wood was declared a winner. Wood had his way in every round. Joe Budreau of Malden and Young Carroll of Lawrence drew in the semi-final.

Bob Shawkey Holds Out for a Raise

KANE, Pa., July 2.—Pitcher Shawkey, released by the Philadelphia Athletics to the New York Highlanders, instead of reporting to New York returned to his home here. He says he will not report to New York unless he is given an increase in salary. Shawkey is said to be considering an offer from the Federal League.

MORE 'SHOWERS' IN THE FORECAST

Thousands of dollars of damage was today added to the rain storm damage of the past thirty-four hours. More cellars were flooded and more streets were washed out in Greater Boston and more inconvenience added to the already hard lot of the commuters.

A considerable portion of Milk street, between Hawley and Devonshire streets, has sunk more than a foot by the downpour. Boxes and red flags have been placed in the depressions to warn automobilists and teamsters of the danger. Other sections of the street further down are in bad condition.

While there had been only a drizzle during the early forenoon the thirty-four hour record up to 8 a. m. today showed a total rainfall of 4.31 inches. The twenty-four hour total to 2 a. m. was 4.56 inches. Only three other thirty-four hour periods in the history of the local weather bureau have exceeded this. The last was in August of 1873.

The present rainfall holds all July records. The only thing that is safe is the twenty-four-hour record of November 20-21, 1876, when 5.43 inches of rain fell.

The official forecast for today was "probable showers." Tomorrow it is "unsettled, generally fair." A consignment of warm weather for Sunday and Monday, with double holidays, is reported on the way here.

The New York papers this morning say that the fifty-three minutes late in arriving at the South Station today and the Federal Express was three hours late behind schedule. The Fall River and Providence boats were late and had to keep the respective boat trains about thirty-five minutes behind on their runs to Boston.

Long before the official figures were on tap, however, the city street and fire departments were well aware of the record nature of the downpour. Early in the morning frantic B. S. telephone messages commenced to pour into headquarters.

Watchmen in downtown buildings commenced to find cellars rapidly filling, due to the choking up of sewers, taxed far beyond capacity and, in many cases, obstructed by the loads of sand and dirt washed from the streets by the pressure of the little floods.

As the city of Boston is responsible for damage caused by failure of the sewer system, hurry calls were sent out for "bailers" of every sort, from donkey engine pumps to bucket brigades. Where possible, fire engines were sent out to syphon out cellars. The city will probably lose thousands of dollars through such damage.

A hail storm in western Nebraska is reported to have caused $500,000 damage in crops. Five persons are reported dead in northeastern Oklahoma and two in Colorado as the result of storms there.

THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY OF BOSTON

DIVIDEND NO. 105

A quarterly dividend of three per cent. has been declared, payable August 2, 1915, to stockholders of record at the close of business July 15, 1915.

T. K. CUMMINGS, Treasurer.

Boston, June 30, 1915.

The Universal Tide Power Company

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

The price of stock of this company will advance from par ($100) to $105 on July 15, 1915. Shares on July 12, 1915. Those desiring stock should order same, kindly communicate with us at once.

JOHN A. KOBB, President.
175 Tremont Street, Boston.

Biggest 24-Hour Rainfall Since the Year 1879

Boston, up to 2 a. m. today, got more rain in twenty-four hours than in any similar period since 1879. In only three twenty-four-hour periods since the Weather Bureau has kept records has there been more rain. The record fall was on November 20-21, 1876. The figures show:

July 1-2, 1915, twenty-four hours to 2 a. m.	4.56 in.
July 2, 2 to 8 a. m.	.25 in.
Total for this storm (with stray drizzles unaccounted for)	4.81 in.
November 20-21, 1876	5.43 in.
June 9-10, 1878	5.35 in.
August 18-19, 1879	4.00 in.
February 12, 1906	4.03 in.
September 3-4, 1905	4.26 in.

Man Electrocuted in South Boston Tube

Bernard McLaughlin, thirty-five, of No. 47 Dorchester street, Charlestown, was electrocuted, early today, while at work in the new South Boston tunnel at the corner of First street and Dorchester avenue, South Boston. He was employed as a laborer by the J. P. Meiswenro Contracting Company. The man was discovered by John Nolan, another laborer, who summoned Dr. Fred J. Sennott, who pronounced the man dead. Medical Examiner Magrath was notified.

Harvard to Have Military Lectures

A feature of the Summer school instruction at Harvard is to be a series of public lectures on military history.

The first lecture will be held next Wednesday evening in Emerson 5 with Major Henry L. Higginson as lecturer.

Subsequent speakers will be Captain Arthur L. Conger, U. S. A.; Professor H. M. Johnson, Edwin F. Gay and Albert B. Hart.

David Quinn, 20, Dies Calmly in Chair

AUBURN, N. Y., July 2.—Spurning assistance as he coolly walked to the death chair, twenty-year-old David Quinn was executed in Auburn prison today for the murder of Harry Edwards, a Wells-Fargo express agent at Corning, in February, 1914. Thomas Mott Osborne, the prison reformer and warden of Sing Sing, tried unsuccessfully to secure a respite for Dunn.

Franklin Roosevelt Operated Upon

WASHINGTON July 2.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, has been operated on for appendicitis at the naval hospital here. He was stricken with an acute attack at his home and soon afterward was rushed to the hospital. He passed a restful night and today was reported much improved.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were firm at the opening, but there was very little trading. The price trend appeared to be upward, but there was not enough business to make what movement there was appear definite. U. S. Rubber was very weak in New York, selling nearly seven points on first sales. Its directors decided to pass the dividend on the common stock, but the quarterly disbursements of 2 per cent. on first preferred and 1½ on the second preferred have been declared. Many market followers are of the opinion that there will be no activity to stocks until after the German reply on the Lusitania incident has been received at Washington. Its effect will depend entirely upon its tenor. The slight influence upon markets of the sinking of the Ancona by a submarine may indicate that the international situation is of less importance as a factor in speculation than had been feared. Its delay in replying to President Wilson's latest protest is probable, that Germany fully appreciates how soon things are forgotten by any public.

EARLY PRICE CHANGES.

Among the most active issues in New York during the first fifteen minutes. Among gains there were Ontario Silver 1, Anaconda, ex-dividend, ¼, American Can 1⅛, Canadian Pacific ½, Reading ¼, Bethlehem Steel ¼, Baldwin ½, Goodrich ⅝, Studebaker ¼, and Westinghouse ¼. Among losses were U. S. Rubber 6¾, American Smelting ⅞, Union Pacific ⅜ and Missouri, Kansas and Texas ⅛.

The Boston market was exceedingly tiet and the price range was from row. Zinco were the most active stocks. Butte & Superior advanced 1¾ and American Zinc 1⅛. Among other gains were Calumet & Arizona ⅝, Copper Range ¼, Hancock ½ and United Fruit ¼. North Butte was off ⅛ and Massachusetts Gas ¼.

Americans were weak in London, especially Amalgamated, Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Reading, Steel and Texas and Union Pacific.

Foreign exchanges was firmer. The increased buying is due to transactions to pay maturities and interest charges due the first of the month on American securities held in Europe. Foreign liquidation is evidently increasing also.

METAL TRADE EXPECTATIONS.

Copper producers believe there will be more buying of metal after July 5. They are holding the price firm and their figure is not being shaded much by small selling interests. The metals steady and has an advancing tendency. This is also true of spelter. In London spot copper went off £1 9d, futures £1 2s 6d and electrolytic £1. Lead was the 6d. lower and spelter unchanged.

NEW VEGETABLES IN THE MARKET

New potatoes and new sweet corn are today selling in the market. The former are plentiful and the prices range from a thirty-five cents a peck. The price for corn averages about seventy-five cents a dozen.

Other new vegetables in the market are yellow turnips, sweet potatoes, string beans, peppers, cauliflower and cabbages.

Berries are also coming in plentifully and the prices are reasonable. Cantaloupe melons are selling two for a quarter, asparagus at twenty cents a bunch, celery at fifteen and peas at seventy-five cents a peck.

No changes are noted in the prices on flour, cereals, dairy products and meats.

Swordfish is plentiful, but it is thought that salmon will be scarce for the Fourth, owing to the storms. A large supply of fish is coming from the Great Lakes.

Birth Rate Drops, May Tax Bachelors

PARIS, July 2.—The decline in the birth rate of France has been particularly noticeable during the war began. The rate in 1914 averaged 1,000 births per day, but at the beginning of 1915 the figures dropped to 850.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Henry Ford, His Men and His Machine

HENRY FORD having sent to New York for scientific treatment several of his employes addicted to the use of drugs or alcoholic liquors, the representative of the Ford welfare department accompanying them has this to say of the principles animating his chief:

"Mr. Ford looks upon each man as tremendously more important than a machine. When, however, a machine goes wrong we have a mechanic who looks it over and fixes it. Now, a man is much more important to Mr. Ford. He wants to see that each man has every possible opportunity of bettering himself."

Men look upon a machine performing some task of marvellous complexity and in tones approaching awe say: "It is almost human!"

They look upon a workman, toiling twelve hours a day, at a monotonous, even degrading, task, for a wage that barely suffices for the day's needs and with a contemptuous shrug remark: "He's a mere machine."

But the machine of steel is tended with a care almost loving lest it break down. It is not speeded beyond its capacity. The temperature in which it works is carefully regulated. At night it is oiled and rubbed down like some splendid athlete after his triumph in the arena. The human beings who tend it are unremitting in their care, and often boyish in the pride they take in their charge.

But who, as a rule, takes pride in them?

Few, indeed, are the workmen for whom employers manifest the care they show to their machines. The men, aye, and women and children, too, may work long hours in fetid overheated air or in damp cellars. They rub down and cover the machines they serve, but who gives their tired bodies any restful attention? They are speeded up to the breaking point, and should that point be passed their employer calls in no repairer of the human body or restorer of the human will to bring them back to efficiency. They must look out for themselves.

Henry Ford early recognized the difference in treatment of the two machines. He set out to do justice to the neglected one—the workingman. Recognizing that dull, monotonous and mind-dwarfing work must be done, he made the conditions of employment such that men could do it and still not be stunted in their manly qualities. The world gasped when he paid $5 a day to men who merely tightened screws on one automobile after another, but the money saved those men from becoming mere machines, enabled them to live and to save like men and cultivate wider human interests.

In endeavoring to cure some of his workmen from evil habits, Mr. Ford is merely carrying out his principle of conserving the efficiency of his men as he would that of his machines. If a gear had a habit of slipping that part of the machinery would be shut down until a mechanical expert could correct it. The human machines which put themselves out of order with liquor or with drugs are to be given like expert attention.

In all this Mr. Ford disavows any sort of benevolent purpose. The reports of his company's profits emphatically demonstrate that his policy pays. Not a one of the great employers who insist on regarding labor as a commodity and men as machines for the care and upkeep of which they are not responsible can point to a business success that parallels Ford's. Yet few emulate his methods or are willing to accept as he does the responsibility and the necessity of keeping the working force in as good condition as the mechanical equipment.

Is it so exceedingly hard for corporations employing labor to understand that fair play pays?

An Excellent Appointment

Among the Governor's excellent list of appointments, none was better than that of Walton A. Green of the Boston Journal on the Military Education Commission.

Mr. Green has given a great deal of his time and money generously to the cause of our national defence. Like all intelligent citizens, he has recognized our pitiful helplessness in the midst of nations who are now proving their ferocity and demonstrating the folly of relying for national protection upon the sense of justice and the civilization of the great national groups. But unlike so many of us, Mr. Green not only recognizes the danger to this country of our neglecting he national defence, but he has recognized also the personal duty of DOING SOMETHING HIMSELF to help correct this dangerous condition.

If one hundredth part of the people of the country who believe, as Mr. Green believes, that we ought to obey the injunction of the father of our country, that in time of peace we must prepare for war and that the greatest guarantee of peace is the reputation of being able to take care of ourselves in the case of war, would do half as much personally as Mr. Green has done to remove the danger, in five years we would be entirely out of danger.

—More Truth Than Poetry—

By James J. Montague

Misplaced Affection

Scientists, according to Wex Jones, have discovered that vegetables are capable of hatred.

I love an early onion,
I hold in high esteem
Potatoes from Bermuda
When nicely hashed in cream.
But every time I eat them
I deeply am concerned,
For always I discover
My love is not returned.
Gnarled up with indigestion,
The doctor I await.
While these ungrateful esculents
Inside me glut their hate.
So, therefore, in the future
More cautious I shall be,
I'll only love the vegetables
That think as much of me.

The Need of the Hour

While we are working for a greater navy, suppose we also try to secure a greater secretary?

Convincing Evidence

M. Hohan, the cartoonist, came into the eating house Saturday night and announced that peace had been declared. He was convinced of this, he said, because he had just heard a newsboy cry: "Final War Extra."

The Land of Peace

No one is disturbed by war or rumors of war in Yucatan, according to the New York Evening Post.

IN Europe—we will skip the rest,
No need to dwell on that affair;
In Mexico—from east to west—
You know just what is happening there.
South Africa is up in arms,
The war god marches through Japan;
But calm amid all these alarms
Serenely basks old Yucatan.

DOC BRYAN rages 'round the States
And, with adroit spellbinding art,
At every water tank orates
Till no one knows what he will start.
The Dutch are muttering in their sleep,
The Greeks are rising to a man;
But still the folks are going to keep
The peace in good old Yucatan.

THE parrots chatter in the trees,
The monkeys with their sinuous tails
Swing pendant with apparent ease
Despite the furious tropic gales,
No hint of battle fills the air;
But any ordinary man
Would rather die most anywhere
Than live in peace in Yucatan!

Old Doc Cook Was a Strong Card—Once

"It isn't what you used to be, but what you are today" will be the song they'll sing to Mr. Bryan when he tries to get the same Chautauqua terms he got when he was Secretary of State.

When They Use All They've Got

The professor who says no human brain was ever worked to its full capacity never saw a small boy thinking up ways to get under a circus tent when the canvas men were on guard.

Why This Continual Knocking?

There is no reason to scoff because Josephus Daniels, who is not a lawyer, was given the degree of LL.D. Josephus knows more about the law than he does about the navy.

We Learn by Experience

Breach of Promise Suit Dorothy Dix Declares Is Block to Matrimony

No Other Thing on Earth That Makes Majority of Women So Ashamed of Sex as Demand for Damages to 'Wounded Heart.'

By Dorothy Dix

THE announcement that a woman has just been awarded $115,000 in a breach of promise suit will fill adventuresses with joy and give fresh impetus to the sentimental grafting game, but it will cause all judicious women to grieve.

For there is no other such effectual discourager of matrimony as the breach of promise suit. It blocks all of the approaches to romance, for if a man must do his courting with the fear of the law before his eyes, if he suspicions that his lady love is keeping tab on her kisses, and assessing them at so much per kiss, and if he has to pause when he starts to write a billet doux to consider how it will sound when it is read aloud in court by an unsympathetic lawyer, why none but the foolhardy will venture on so hazardous an undertaking as paying attention to a woman.

Thus woman, with her own hand, will have killed the goose that lays the golden eggs, and cut herself off from the chance of catching a husband, because many a man who begins by playing in love ends by falling in love in earnest. The path of flirtation runs straight to the altar.

Romance to the contrary, Cupid does not often shoot at sight. A man may be ever so strongly attracted to a woman, but before he undertakes to stand for her bills for life he wants to get well acquainted with her, also to analyze his own heart throbs, and to do this he must have freedom to advance or withdraw. If he suspects that the maiden has a breach of promise suit to spring out upon him like a Jack-in-the-Box, he will be scared off from the attempt.

Either Blackmail or Vulgarity Unspeakable

In all good truth, there is no other thing on earth that makes the majority of women so ashamed of their sex as when they hear that a woman is suing a man for breach of promise, for a breach of promise suit is either blackmail or vulgarity unspeakable.

There is even a kind of grotesque humor in the phraseology in which such suits are cast. It is enough to make a cynic laugh when one reads of a man "trifling with the tender affections and the guileless innocence" of a woman shrewd enough to keep every scrap of a letter to show in court, or to hear of the damages to the "delicate susceptibility of a woman's nature" when that woman can shamelessly bare to the curious eyes of the world her hurt heart, can drag every secret of her romance out to the public gaze and parade the fact that she has been jilted and forsaken and is trying to force herself upon an unwilling husband.

There is no doubt that the man who wins the trusting heart of a young girl and then forsakes her—who loves and rides away—richly deserves to be punished for it. But the women who suffer such wrongs are not the ones who bring the suits for breach of promise.

A woman whose heart is really broken doesn't take it into court. Her one sure instinct is to hide it. Her delicate susceptibilities have, indeed, been trampled under foot, but she knows that no money can buy her back the love she has lost, and her one burning desire is to keep the world from seeing how she suffers.

There is one remedy for the breach of promise suit scandal that would put an effectual quietus on it, and that is to try such cases before women juries. There would probably never be another such case, for no woman would be willing to have twelve other women figure out the damages to her injured heart. If she did, she wouldn't get enough money to pay her car fare home.

Long Green Poultice for Heart Scratches

This would not be because women are hard on each other, or disposed to favor the man, but because women know each other too well to be taken in by any fairy story about a credulous creature of mature years being beguiled into falling in love with a faithless man. It is perfectly true that every man thinks he is the pursuer and woman the pursued, but most women could tell a great deal more about why a man proposed than he could.

Also no woman jury would lay much stress on the heart injuries that can be cured by a poultice of the long green. Such hurts to the heart are not real breaks, they are only superficial cracks.

When it deals with women an American jury is not justice. It is gallantry gone to seed. A pretty woman—and ugly women have the discretion not to sue the men who don't want to marry them—has only to shed a few pearly tears in a lace handkerchief, and twelve sympathetic men assess damages on the man in the case. This pity for beauty in distress does honor to the jury's heart, but not its head. Moreover, it is not justice, for a woman capable of bringing a breach of promise suit is perfectly able to take care of herself in a love affair or any business deal.

The breach of promise suit nuisance should be abated. It puts the weapon of the blackmailer in the hands of every unprincipled woman. And it shames every delicate-minded woman by dragging the holy things of the soul through the mire.
